#25 in a Series of Information Updates Preceding the 2011 IAUP Triennial

We are pleased to welcome Microsoft Partners in Learning as a sponsor of the XVI International Association of University Presidents (IAUP) Triennial in New York City, June 17 – 20, 2011.

Microsoft Partners in Learning is a 10-year, $500M global initiative aimed at supporting schools and educators' use of technology to help every student receive an excellent education and gain the skills they need in work and life. With governments, academic institutions and NGOs, Partners in Learning has invested in a comprehensive research program, the creation of vibrant communities of education stakeholders, and specific Educator and Schools programs to improve teaching and learning and optimize the use of technology within pedagogy. Thus far, the program has trained more than 8 million educators and reached more than 190 million students in 114 countries. You may learn more at www.partnersinlearning.com

The 2011 IAUP Triennial will be held at the Marriot Marquis Hotel, directly overlooking Broadway and Times Square. In addition to keynote addresses and contributed papers from university presidents, the Triennial encourages small group discussions and social networking between chief executive officers. Registration for the Triennial and room reservations at the hotel can be made conveniently online at www.iauptriennial.org.

IAUP membership is limited to rectors, vice-chancellors and presidents of accredited colleges and universities that offer a baccalaureate degree or higher. You can learn more about the association on our website www.iaup.org.
